

ORPHANS' DAY OUTING.

Vincent Astor Offers Use of Two Touring Cars.

Vincent Astor, following the example set by his father, the late Col. John Jacob Astor, has contributed the use of his touring cars for Orphans' Day, Wednesday. The White Rats Transfer Company has entered a large new truck and Oscar Lyons has entered two trucks which he can convert into sight-seeing cars for the children. Music will be furnished by bands from the Leake & Watts Orphan House and the German Odd Fellows' Home.

The children will go to Steeplechase Park at the invitation of George C. Tillyou, and this will give them a glimpse of the ocean and let them play in the sand, something which they have not been able to do for several years. At Steeplechase Park they will also have the freedom of all amusements and can play on the pier to their heart's content.

The association still needs cars and trucks to help make the day a success, and requests that owners communicate with them as soon as possible in regard to entries of cars or trucks. The office at 1,777 Broadway is open from 9 until 6, and contributions of any kind will be appreciated.

Vogler Climbs Mount Hood.

F. W. Vogler of Portland, Ore., broke all previous records last week in climbing Mount Hood to the United States Government camp near Portland, in the Reo the Fifth. In many places the snow was five feet deep. The altitude attained was over 10,000 feet. This is the earliest date that the Government camp has ever been reached by automobile.
